Piranga rubra — Another Long Island, N. Y., Record.— It will be of interest in connection with the record of this species made by Dr. Braislin (antea, p. 147), to note another.

My correspondent, Mr. Selah B. Strong of Setauket, L. I., wrote to me April 11, 1901, as follows: "This morning I saw a, to me, new bird. It was about three quarters the size of a robin. Head, and nearly his entire body, between cardinal and scarlet with a shade of grayish brown on wings." I at once sent Mr. Strong a specimen of the Summer Tanager for comparison and he wrote that there was no doubt of the identity of the bird.

On April 22 Mr. Strong wrote as follows: "The Tanager is becoming very tame and I see him constantly; during yesterday's storm he was swinging on the vines on the front of the house, and when I went out of the door he flew from under the steps; again he was on the ground in front of my study window and did not mind our watching him. At present he is flitting among the trees in the orchard."

A subsequent letter from Mr. Strong stated that although the bird remained over ten days on his premises it finally disappeared.— WILLIAM DUTCHER, New York City.

Blue-winged Warbler (Helminthophila pinus) near Boston, Mass.— In the afternoon of May 29, at Waverley, Mass., I was walking in a meadow through which a brook flowed. The banks of the brook were thickly grown with trees and shrubs. From the border of this growth came the two-note song of this warbler, and it was repeated continuously during the hour or more I spent in the vicinity. I first saw the bird working his way through a tall bush, and while I watched him his preference seemed to be for the smaller trees and border shrubs. He was not shy, so I had excellent opportunity, sometimes from within three or four feet, to observe all his distinctive markings. I think there were two birds there, but I am positive of only one, an adult male.— GUY EMERSON, Brookline, Mass.

Capture of Kirtland's Warbler at Ann Arbor, Michigan. — I have the pleasure of recording the capture of a fine female Kirtland's Warbler (Dendroica kirtlandi) taken by myself on the morning of the 14th of May of this year, almost within the city limits of Ann Arbor. I had the pleasure of watching the motions of this rare bird, as it was low down on the branches of an elm at the side of the road. This bird was very slow, yet graceful in its movements, as it searched the buds and leaves for its food. I went so close to it that I could see the markings plainly and knew it was a Kirtland's, for it is almost exactly the counterpart of the one we have here in the Museum. While I observed it I did not hear a note and its slow, deliberate movements reminded me of Dendroica palmarum. I should have watched it longer only it was likely to be frightened away by passers-by, so I shot it and have it now finely mounted. — NORMAN A. WOOD, Ann Arbor, Mich.
